IN SOUTH AFRICA. A Voyage With a Lion.

Public attention at this time is directed toward south Africa and the adventures of Captain Stanley on the great Fish river in that far distant country are apropos and worthy of perusal. He says:

"I've had many a queer voyage in my time, but the queerest I had was one I made somewhat unexpectedly, on my way back from a hunting excursion.

As I neared the bank I saw that the river was in full flood, more than twice its usual breadth, and running like a mill race. I knew at once that I should have a tough job to get across—for a flooded African river is no joke, I can tell you. But I knew also that my wife would be terribly anxious if I didn't come back on the day that I had fixed—South Africa being a place where a good many things may happen to a man—so I determined to chance it.

Just at the water's edge I found an old bushman that I knew well, who had a boat of his own, so I hailed him at once: "Well, Kalloni, what will you take to put me across the river?"

"No fifty dollars this time, boss" (master), said the old fellow in his half-Dutch, half-English jargon. "Boat no get" cross to-day, water good (great).

And never a bit could I persuade him, although I offered him money to make any ordinary bushman jump head first down a precipice.

He spoke so positively that, although I am not easily frightened, I certainly did feel uncomfortable. However, when you've got to do a thing of that sort, the less you think of it the better, so I jumped into the boat and shoved off.

I had barely got clear of the shore when I found that the old fellow was right, for the boat shot down the stream like an arrow. I saw in a moment that there was no hope of paddling her across, and all I could do was to keep her head straight. But I hadn't the chance of doing that very long, for just then a big tree came driving along, and hitting my boat full on the quarter, smashed her like an egg shell. I had just time to clutch the projecting roots and whisk myself on to them, and tree and I went away down stream together and I don't know how many miles an hour.

At first I was so rejoiced at escaping just when all seemed over with me that I didn't think much of what was to come next, but before long I got something to think of with a vengeance. The tree, as I've said, was a large one, and the branch end (the opposite one to where I sat) was all one mass of green leaves. All at once just as I was shifting myself to a safer place among the roots, the leaves suddenly shook and parted, and out peeped the great yellow head and fierce eyes of an enormous lion.

All at once I noticed that the lion seemed to be getting strangely restless and turning his great head from side to side in a nervous kind of way, as if he saw or heard something he didn't like. At first I couldn't imagine what on earth was the matter with him, but presently I caught a sound which scared me much worse than it had the lion. Far in the distance I could hear, a dull booming roar, which I had heard too often not to recognize at once; we were nearing a waterfall!

I had seen the great falls of the Fish River more than once, and the bare thought of being carried over those tremendous precipices made my blood run cold. Yet being devoured by a lion would hardly be much of an improvement, and as I hadn't the ghost of a chance of being able to swim ashore, there really seemed to be no other alternative.

Faster and faster we went—louder and louder grew the roar of the cataract; the lion seemed to have given himself up for lost and crouching down among the leaves, only uttering a low whine every now and then. I was fairly at my wits' end what to do when all of a sudden I caught sight of something that gave me a glance of hope.

A little way ahead of us the river narrowed suddenly, a rocky headland thrust itself out a good way into the stream. On one of the lowest points of it grew a thick clump of trees, whose boughs overhung the water; and it struck me that, if we only passed near enough, I might manage to catch hold of one of the branches and swing myself up on to the rock.

No sooner said than done. I started up, hardly caring whether the lion attacked me or not, and planted myself firmly upon one of the biggest roots, where I could take a good spring when the time came. I knew that this would be my last chance, for by this time we were so near the precipice that I could see quite plainly, a little way ahead the great cloud of spray and vapor that hovered over the great waterfall. Even at the best it was a desperate venture, and I can tell you that I felt my heart beginning to thump like a sledge hammer as we came closer and closer to the point at which I thought what would happen if I missed my leap.

Just as we neared it, it happened that our tree, struck against something and turned fairly crosswise to the current, the end with the lion on it swinging out into mid-stream, while my end was driven close to the rock on which the clump of trees grew.

Now or never. I made one spring and just clutched the lowest bough; and as I dragged myself on to it I heard the last roar of the doomed lion mingling with the thunder of the waterfall as he vanished into the cloud of mist that overhung the precipice.

The Trade in Confederate Bonds.

The Washington correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal says: Another attempt is being made to get up a boom in Confederate bonds. For some time past Baltimore stock-brokers have been advertising for Confederate State bonds. The movement in these bonds started some three years ago, and since that time the purchases have been very large, one firm alone handling about $30,000,000 of them. Baltimore has been the headquarters for their purchase, and Europe the destination of the bonds, orders coming from a large London firm. When the excitement first began the bonds, which were considered worthless, brought $1 per $1,000. The price subsequently advanced and has gone as high as $15 per thousand, though now they are from $6 to $8 per $1,000 for 5, 7 and 8 per cent. bonds. The bonds are somewhat scarce now, though some days $100,000 will change hands, and other days not $100. The dealers are altogether in coupon bonds, with the 1865 or prior coupons on. One Baltimore dealer, who makes the Confederate bonds a specialty, has offers from the South of bonds in lots ranging from $100,000 to $500,000. Richmond brokers and others in the South are purchasing them and sending them to the London house, the head of which is said to be a party by the name of Moses. North Carolina war bonds are also being bought for $4 on the $1,000. Since the flurry began there has been great rummaging about old closets, chests, boxes, etc., for the pieces of paper that contained the promise to pay of the Confederate States of America. Some bring them into brokers' offices already framed, having been preserved as curiosities; others bring them stiff with paste, having taken them from the screens which they have long decorated, and it is even said the bonds have at times been used for wall paper by fantastically inclined people. It is safe to say the walls have needed new papering since the Confederate bonds began to have a market value. What they are being bought for is what no fellow can find out. Some advance the theory that the purchasers entertain a forlorn hope of their being paid some day, but another, and perhaps equally as rational a theory, has been put forward. During the late war England did buy some Confederate securities, and at the close of the war found them worthless. It has been suggested that the holders still entertain an idea of getting something back. The present purchasers, it is said, believe the same way. The summing up of the theory is that the English holders look for some complications to arise between the two countries, and hope that in its adjustment England will be in a position to insist on the United States indemnifying the English holders of Confederate bonds.

It seems that America, after all, is unable to make good her claim to the possession of the tallest and largest trees in the world. Every one has read of the marvels of the Yosemite valley and of Yellowstone park, the huge national sporting ground of the United States. But what are the giants of California in comparison with a tree which has lately been discovered in Australia? It has long been known that in Tasmania there are eucalypti measuring 200 feet from the ground to the first branch, and more than 350 feet in total height; and there is, or lately was, on Mount Wellington, near Hobart Town, a tree of this species the trunk of which was eighty-six feet in circumference. But a still more gigantic monarch of the woods has been recently discovered in Victoria. It is a well-proportioned specimen of the Eucalyptus amygdalina, and its top is nearer to the sky than the cross of St. Paul's Cathedral, for it is no less than 430 feet above the ground.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.
Pain in the right side, under edge of ribs, increasing on pressure; sometimes the pain is on the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder and is sometimes taken for Rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are constive, sometimes alternating with laxity; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight dry cough is sometimes attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled; his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low, and, although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it.

If you have any of the above symptoms, you can certainly be cured by the use of the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS. When you buy McLANE'S PILLS, insist on having DR. C. McLANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS, made by Fleming Bros., Pittsburgh, Pa. If you can find the genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, send us 25 cents by mail, and we will send them to you.

Pacific Net and Twine Co.
SAN FRANCISCO, April 11th, 1883.

For general convenience, we have sent a supply of No. 20, 12-ply Genuine Scotch Salmon Net Twine, to the care of A. M. JOHNSON & CO., Astoria, which will be sold at low enough figures to make it an object for all net menders to use it for repairs, in place of the more costly No. 40, 12-ply. Fishermen who have heretofore used this grade of twine for repairs, claim that the durability of the patch is equal to the balance of the net, after the latter has had a few weeks use. We think it will be money in your pocket to try it. For prices and samples apply to A. M. JOHNSON & CO., Astoria.
